I tried changing my disk from IDE to AHCI, disconnecting the DVD drive, and using a USB key, but nothing seems to work. Is there any way to force 11.5 to recognize the 8GB USB key as a hard drive? Thanks. A: I recommend a USB key (64 GB), even if the PC has a floppy disk drive. If you're lucky enough to have an external hard drive, great. This is common due to HDD size. Most of the time, when a PC doesn't recognize a USB key, it is because the BIOS doesn't support booting from USB. You'll need to set the PC to boot from the USB key through a BIOS configuration. If the PC has a floppy disk drive, you can start the computer by using either a floppy disk or an optical disk. That is, if the motherboard support booting from a floppy disk, it can boot from the floppy disk. If the motherboard supports booting from optical disk, it can boot from the optical disk. If the motherboard doesn't support booting from either a floppy disk or optical disk, it's no use to try to boot from either one. Q: How to get the output from an Android app I have 2 apps: the main one, that needs to get the text from another. The messages for each app are stored in shared preferences but how to get the output from them? If I use startActivityForResult(), the output is saved in the SharedPreferences, so the second app will lose it. A: In app 2, implement a method like this: public void onActivityResult(int requestCode, int resultCode, Intent data) { //if you need to share data with app1 here (all requests are >= 0) //as an example: Log.i("TEST","app1 shared a result"); } You can also use ActivityResult as follow: public void onActivityResult(int requestCode, int resultCode, Intent data) { if(requestCode == TESTSHARE_REQUEST){ Log.i("TEST","app1 shared a result"); //you will share data between them } if(requestCode ==

I want to add an if-statement to it which checks if the number is a 5, then it must add another one. But it does not work, any idea? function getAbr(i){ randomNumber = Math.floor(Math.random()*1000); if(randomNumber === 5) { alert('Correct!') } } A: Instead of if you must use === (meaning it should be equal). === checks for type and value of an expression. 5 == 5 is true 5 === 5 is false If your random number is always 5, then you need to use == 5 == 5 is true 5 === 5 is true For IE //Version 9+ if(document.all) //
